Cest of Construction.

Municipal Architect Snowden Ashford was on the stand for several hours testifying as to the cost of equatruction of buildings in the District and the increased rate in building materials and cost of construction. He said, in answer to questions by Reddeld, that some building materials had increased in cost, while others either had remained stationary or had decreased. Steel, he said, had increased about 11 a gross too in the last two years.

Mr. Ashford was interrogated as to a request by Hopewell Darnellie for an estimate of the cost of the Southers Building. He replied:

The committee began to delve into the relationship between the Southern Building Corporation and the Richmond Realty Corporation when the Richmond Realty Corporation when the hearing commenced in the morning. A plan, suggested by O. P. Sanda, the real power in the Richmond, for a pooling arrangement, was contained in a letter to Charles A. Douglas, a director of the Southern. The letter concluded:

Wanted to Get Control.

Wanted to Get Control.

"Why not?" asked Reddield.

"Well. It was a midus operandi by which they wanted to get control of the Southern Ruilding Corporation, pure and simple. They get 231 shares of the preferred and common stock, and they made the Washington stockholders minority stockholders after we had turned in these assets. That was the point that I wanted to being out. They got control by virtue of this proceeding, and then refused to execute the agreement.

"So that, as a matter of fact, you wish us to understand that the Richmood Healty Corporation got control, under this agreement, of the property of the Southern Ruilding Corporation and then failed to carry out, or, as other articles of the agreement entered into between the two that."

"To clear up this whole matter," questioned Mr. Douglas, "as I see it, Mr. Baker, this property was bought from Mgr. Lee, of Sr. Matthew's Church, for lik a foot, amounting to $400,000 and sold to the Southern Commercial Congress at E2 a foot, amounting to $50,000 or $511,000."

"Is the Richmond Realty Corporation still in existence?" asked Judge Prouty.
"Yes, sir."
"Is the Southern Building Corporation still in existence?"
"It has been dissolved, but it continues, under the law of Virginia, for all purposes of litigation and liquidation, for two years. I think," returned Mr. Carusi.
